

A large, vibrant collage of various protest signs and banners, including 'BRITAIN OUT OF IRELAND', 'BLACK LIVES MATTER', 'PEACE CAMP', 'NO CUTS', and 'SAVE OUR NHS'. The collage is framed by a large, stylized red number '5'.

years of resistance

SATURDAY 7th JULY, 1pm Roll Call/Rally
Grosvenor Square, London W1

SUNDAY 8th JULY, 10-4pm Conference/Exhibition
Conway Hall, Red Lion Square, London WC1

Part of a weekend of London events and week of activities around the UK
www.campaignopposingpolicesurveillance.com

Sat 7th July, 1-3pm: Roll Call / Rally: Grosvenor Sq, London W1
Sun 8th July, 10-4pm: Conference / Exhibition: Conway Hall, Red Lion Sq, London WC1
1st to 8th July: Week of local events and activities around the UK - please organise!

In 1968, following demonstrations against the Vietnam War in London's Grosvenor Square, the police set up a Special Demonstration Squad (SDS). Since that time, 50 years ago, over 1,000 groups campaigning in the UK for a better world have been spied on, infiltrated and targeted by political policing. Their protests and demonstrations are also subjected to ongoing police opposition and control to try to limit their effectiveness.

This targeting has included groups campaigning for equality, justice, the environment and international solidarity, for rights for women, LGBTQ, workers and for animals, for community empowerment, and those campaigning against war, racism, sexism, corporate power, legal repression and police oppression and brutality. Such groups have represented many millions of people throughout the UK who want to make the world a better, fairer and more sustainable place for everyone.

Yet almost any group of any kind that stood up to make a positive difference has been or could have potentially been a target for secret political policing. We now know this because of campaigners' recent efforts to expose and challenge the SDS and other similar secret units, and their shocking and unacceptable tactics. Individuals within those campaign groups have been spied on, subjected to intrusions in their personal lives, been victims of miscarriages of justice, and many deceived into intimate and abusive relationships with secret police, ie people that who were not who they said they were. In July 2015 we succeeded in forcing Theresa May (now Prime Minister) to set up the current Undercover Policing Public Inquiry, which was tasked with getting to the truth by July 2018, and insisting on action to prevent police wrong-doing in future. Now, 3 years on, the public inquiry has achieved very little due to police obstruction.

When the SDS was formed they aimed to 'shut down' the movements they were spying on. But despite disgusting police tactics, movements for positive change are still here and growing, and have had many successes on the way.

The planned events are in support of those campaigning for full exposure and effective action at the Undercover Policing Inquiry, and against police attempts to delay and undermine it. We aim to encourage more groups to find out about the Inquiry and how they can get involved and support each other, and to unite the many different groups and organisations who have been victims of our police state because of their efforts to improve society.

Backed by Campaign Opposing Police Surveillance - www.campaignopposingpolicesurveillance.com

Celebrate

50 years

of resistance

despite 50 years of police spies and repression

SATURDAY 7th JULY, 1pm Roll Call/Rally
Grosvenor Square, London W1

SUNDAY 8th JULY, 10-4pm Conference/Exhibition
Conway Hall, Red Lion Square, London WC1

Part of a weekend of London events and week of activities around the UK
www.campaignopposingpolicesurveillance.com

years of resistance

despite 50 years of police spies and repression

SATURDAY 7th JULY, 1pm Roll Call/Rally
Grosvenor Square, London W1

SUNDAY 8th JULY, 10-4pm Conference/Exhibition
Conway Hall, Red Lion Square, London WC1

SUNDAY 8th JULY, 10-4pm Conference/Exhibition
Conway Hall, Red Lion Square, London WC1

Conway Hall, Red Lion Square, London WC1

Part of a weekend of London events and week of activities around the UK

www.campaignopposingpolicesurveillance.com

1968-2018: A Celebration of 50 years of Resistance, Campaigning and Alternatives for A Better World

- despite 50 years of police opposition, spying and repression

Sat 7th July, 1-3pm: Roll Call / Rally: Grosvenor Sq, London W1

Sun 8th July, 10-4pm: Conference / Exhibition: Conway Hall, Red Lion Sq, London WC1

1st to 8th July: Week of local events and activities around the UK - please organise!

MOVEMENTS FOR A BETTER WORLD GROW - POLICE REACT WITH REPRESSIVE TACTICS

In 1968, following demonstrations against the Vietnam War in London's Grosvenor Square, the police set up a Special Demonstration Squad (SDS). Since that time, 50 years ago, over 1,000 groups campaigning in the UK for a better world have been spied on, infiltrated and targeted by political policing. Their protests and demonstrations are also subjected to ongoing police opposition and control to try to limit their effectiveness.

This targeting has included groups campaigning for equality, justice, the environment and international solidarity, for rights for women, LGBTQ, workers and for animals, for community empowerment, and those campaigning against war, racism, sexism, corporate power, legal repression and police oppression and brutality. Such groups have represented many millions of people throughout the UK who want to make the world a better, fairer and more sustainable place for everyone.

Yet almost any group of any kind that stood up to make a positive difference has been or could have potentially been a target for secret political policing. We now know this because of campaigners' recent efforts to expose and challenge the SDS and other similar secret units, and their shocking and unacceptable tactics. Individuals within those campaign groups have been spied on, subjected to intrusions in their personal lives, been victims of miscarriages of justice, and many deceived into intimate and abusive relationships with secret police, ie people that who were not who they said they were. In July 2015 we succeeded in forcing Theresa May (now Prime Minister) to set up the current Undercover Policing Public Inquiry, which was tasked with getting to the truth by July 2018, and insisting on action to prevent police wrong-doing in future. Now, 3 years on, the public inquiry has achieved very little due to police obstruction.

When the SDS was formed they aimed to 'shut down' the movements they were spying on. But despite disgusting police tactics, movements for positive change are still here and growing, and have had many successes on the way.

CELEBRATE 50 YEARS OF CAMPAIGNS AND STRUGGLES, RESILIENCE AND SUCCESSES

The planned events are in support of those campaigning for full exposure and effective action at the Undercover Policing Inquiry, and against police attempts to delay and undermine it. We aim to encourage more groups to find out about the Inquiry and how they can get involved and support each other, and to unite the many different groups and organisations who have been victims of our police state because of their efforts to improve society.

Backed by Campaign Opposing Police Surveillance - www.campaignopposingpolicesurveillance.com